A COUNTRY TAVERN.

The landlord was an elderly man, with a face which bore tokens of having been shaved some weeks before, and had a surly look which was by no means attractive, and his wife, at the moment cooking my dinner, had, as I thought, a strange expression upon her countenance—a worn, terrified look, as though she were constantly afraid of something.

Twice she seemed about to speak, but closed her lips again as the man sauntered toward the door, and at last I broke the silence with the commonplace remark that it was a fire evening.

Think so, stranger!" was all the auswer I received. But after awhile she drew nearer to me and said in a low whisper: "You don't know nothin about these only don't stay here longer'n you can

And she glided away from me in a terrifled manner, leaving me in an exceedingly uncomfortable state of mind. I cast my eye over the homeless landscape with a vague intention of traveling on that night, but I was very weary, and certainly my possessions could be no temptation to erime.

in that moment the woman found time to Whisper in my ear: Don't leave your window open." While I was awaiting the movements of my host the door opened, and two stal-wart, ill favored fellows marched in. They nodded to the landlord, and walking up to the bar called for drink. I pleked up my knapsack and followed my landlord in a moment more, and soon found myself in a large, uncarpeted room, with an immense feather bed perched upon a tall, old fashloned bedstead, a rick. kee. ety table with a cracked ewer and basin

Ancient Egypt.

What we do not know of ancient Egyptian history is much more than what we do know. It is supposable that the prareah of Abraham's time was a shepherd king, but was was king when Joseph had charge of the royal granaries we are not by any means certain about. He might have been the last of the shepherd kings. -New York Times.

QUITE SHOCKING.

A Stranger Who Allowed the Baby to Unduly Interest Her.

It was about 9 o'clock in the evening, and the West Side cable car rattled and lurched along. The passengers were few, and they cast half ourious, half hostile glances at each other. A young couple with a child of about a year and a half old attracted the most attention, however. 'Isn't it disgreceful how young some people marry?" whispered the old maid passenger to the mother of seven.

"It isn't only that, my dear. I married when a child, a mere child, myself. But look how carelessly she holds the poor lit-
